A physical phenomenon is mathematically modeled by physics equations such as conservation laws. Computers are used to find numerical solutions of the problem, called computer simulation. We will learn the foundations of computer programming and computer simulations for diffusion-related phenomena. In addition, we will employ a recent high performance computing technique, graphics unit processing (GPU) computing for the simulations.

Contact:
Takuji Ishikawa (Professor), Yohsuke Imai (Associate professor)
Location: Nano-biomedical Engineering Research Building (A13)
Tel: 022-795-6958 (Secretaries) or 022-795-7005 (Imai)
E-mail: yimai@pfsl.mech.tohoku.ac.jp